Peer Review represents the process of providing individuals with feedback or constructive criticism regarding their work. This process can be helpful in a variety of ways, for both the individual doing the reviewing and the person receiving feedback. Overall, it provides an additional set of eyes and an alternative perspective to assess the assignment. Complete the following in a thorough and conscientious manner – be polite, be honest, be objective.

1. List and describe the positive aspects you notice about the assignment.

2. Consider the assignment, the directions for how to complete it, the expectations as described by the teacher, and any rubric; give the assignment a grade (A, B, C, D, F) based on your assessment of how well it meets the previously listed expectations. Additionally, provide a general explanation describing why this grade was assigned.
3. List and describe, in detail, the specific aspects of the assignment that need to be revised in order to earn the best possible grade.

4. Have a discussion with the assignment’s creator to share your feedback on a personal level.
